The attack on Iraq has nothing to do with the war on terrorism ...

IT'S A WAR ABOUT OIL AND ISRAEL!

"This is America's quarrel, not a single drop of British blood should be shed"

BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY chairman, Nick Griffin, has spelt out the party's policy regarding any conflict with Iraq, in no uncertain terms.

Speaking to a packed meeting of the Nottingham branch of the BNP on Wednesday September 18th, he told the audience,

"This is America's quarrel, not a single drop of British blood should be shed.

"If Saddam Hussein oppresses some of his own people and possibly threatens one or two of his neighbours, it is not Britain's concern, but a matter for the countries of that region.

"We do have a problem with Islamic fundamentalism, but it is here in Britain, not several thousand miles away in the Middle East."

"Iraq is prepared to sell us as much oil as we want in exchange for the medicines, food and engineering equipment they desperately need to help rebuild their shattered country.

"America's attack on Iraq is much more about oil and Israel than it is about their much-publicised war against terrorism."

AMERICA GUZZLES OIL like no other country on earth. But now experts have found that from 2010 onwards, there will be a permanent 3% per year decline of output from the world's oil-fields.

Alarmed by this, a contingency plan was drawn up in September 2000 for Dick Cheney (now Vice-President) and Donald Rumsfeld (Defence Secretary) to consider. The document was entitled Rebuilding America's Defences: Strategies, Forces And Resources For A New Century, and was written by a think-tank called Project for the New American Century (PNAC).

The thrust of their findings was that the United States must secure a more permanent role in the Gulf and that, "the unresolved conflict with Iraq provides the immediate justification ... for a substantial American military presence in the Gulf." The document makes it clear that fully 12 months before September 11th and the start of the 'war against terror', America was planning to invade Iraq to take over the country's oil fields in preparation for the declining output. George Bush and Tony Blair claim the invasion is necessary because Iraq poses a terrorist threat, yet in February the CIA declared that it had no evidence

Look what they've done to Stoke-on-Trent

Council protects Lib-Dem pervert

NEIL Derbyshire, a Liberal Democrat councillor on Stockport Council pleaded guilty on June 5th to indecent assault and attempting to procure an act of gross indecency.

He sexually assaulted a boy of 16 and then offered him £30 to do it again. On his arrest he was carrying a plastic bag containing lubricant, a condom, underpants and polyurethane gloves. The judge at Minshall Street Crown Court gave him a three year rehabilitation order, and placed him on the sex offenders register. Three months later Derbyshire is still representing Stockport's Manor ward on the council. Unbelievably he received full support from the council, including his wife Sue, another Lib-Dem councillor, to continue his role in the chamber. Stockport BNP leafletted Manor Ward to warn residents about their representative, and the leafletting brought an angry response from the disgraced Liberal Democrat councillor. He told the Stockport Express; "The only people who have behaved in an unacceptable and distasteful way are the BNP." BNP organiser for Stockport, Martyn Lord told Freedom; "The arrogance of this man is quite astounding, and the attitude of Stockport Council disgraceful. What sort of message is being sent out to have a known sex offender sitting on the council?"

*A Liberal-Democrat councillor on Preston Council, William Chadwick, is facing charges for making indecent photographs of a child and inciting another person to commit kidnap, rape, torture and murder against a child!

STOKE WAS ONCE the centre for the world's pottery industry. The goods produced were of the highest quality and the industry provided the people of the city with skills that were handed-down from generation to generation.

There's little pottery production left in Stoke now. Those handed-down skills were made redundant when Labour and Conservative governments allowed the import of cheap, poor quality pottery from abroad to swamp the home market.

Not content with destroying the city's main industry, since then Labour and Conservative Governments have stood by and allowed Stoke to decline, investing in their precious South-East but leaving the rest of the country north of Birmingham to fend for itself.

Stoke should have been a priority in Labour's regeneration plans, but instead of providing for the people of the city to rebuild their community, they are in the process of pushing them out and replacing them with economic migrants from South-Eastern Europe and the Third World.

What little money Labour have used on Stoke has been wasted. The heart of the city has been left to decay while the green belt has been destroyed by new-build office blocks that nobody wants to rent. Apart, that is, from a government department resettling asylum seekers in Staffordshire.

Now Labour, bankrupt of ideas, is demolishing the centre of the city, and as this heart is broken, so is the spirit of the people.

Crime, drugs and vandalism are on the increase as our over-stretched and under-funded

KILNS: With their demise so went local skills police struggle to maintain law and order. To make matters worse, there are new cocky villains on the street. They think they are above the law of our country, and in many cases they are. On the Queen's Golden

JUBILEE: Union Jack flags and bunting torn down

Anniversary a gang of them went into Cobridge Park and pulled down all the Union Jacks and ceremonial bunting before ritually destroying them to the accompanying chants of 'bin Laden, bin Laden'. Police decided to take a low profile during the incident to avoid escalating the trouble. This sad episode sums-up the city today. Stoke needs leadership from a political party that will put the people of Stoke first. The city needs to be led by someone who is prepared to stand up against the anti-British policies of Tony Blair and New Labour. That party is the British National Party and Steve Batkin is our candidate to be Mayor of Stoke.

Guess who's going private?

WHO should be put first in healthcare? British citizens who have spent a life-time paying contributions and taxes or economic migrants who have travelled across Europe to Britain to cash in on our benefits system?

The answer's easy for any right-minded person, but Tony Blair and New Labour found it difficult, and have come up with the wrong one. To relieve the pressure on GP surgeries in areas where there has been an overload of economic migrants, the Government is to provide the new arrivals with fast-track private healthcare.

The scheme will cost millions and guess who is going to have to pay for it?

Yes, you're right, loyal British citizens who have spent a life-time paying contributions and taxes.

Home Office cooks the books

THE Home Office is concerned over the high number of ethnic minority inmates in British prisons.

They fear it could provide a damaging interpretation to those seeking to explain it as a race and immigration issue.

To try to deflate these figures they have decided to remove 5,470 inmates from calculations because they are either asylum seekers, refugees or illegal immigrants and hence not regarded as British nationals.

Our prisons hold 15,540 ethnic minority inmates at present, but from next month Home Office figures will show that figure as just 10,070.

In true illegal immigrant tradition, these people are part of a Government-promoted disappearing act.

Thoughts on Immigration

*The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society.

*The British National Party is opposed to 'multiculturalism' because it fragments society and generates conflict.

*The British National Party seeks to protect and preserve the ethnic and cultural integrity of the British people.

*Labour and Conservative Governments, for the past fifty-four years, have allowed large scale immigration into Britain from the Third World against the clear wishes of the British people.

*Now leading population experts predict that the native British people will be a minority in our own country within 60 years.

*The British National Party will end immigration and the settlement of asylum seekers in Britain.

*The British National Party will encourage immigrants to return to their country of ethnic origin by providing generous financial incentives to help those who want to return home.

Schoolboy torched in race attack

RACIST thugs grabbed 11 Year-old Daimon Hicks as he walked home from school in Holbeck, Leeds on Monday 23rd September.

They pinned him down, lit a cigarette lighter in front of a Lynx deodorant aerosol and sprayed flames on his face.

The youngster was left screaming in agony with two-thirds of his face, including his eyes, badly burned.

Police called on community leaders in Leeds to help them in their search for Daimon's attackers.

Mosque sells terror video

ATERRORIST recruitment video glorifying the September 11th attack on the World Trade Centre is openly on sale at Birmingham's Central Mosque.

The video cover features a photograph of an al Qaida terrorist, the plane crashing into the twin towers and the words, "Dig Your Graves".

It's grim stuff, and one of the reasons why former MI5 boss Dame Stella Rimmington believes that Britain's mosques should be kept under 24 hour surveillance by the secret service. She told the Birmingham Evening Mail:

"Infiltrating extremist organisations is the only way forward in the war against terrorism and targeting mosques could form part of that."

Her remarks brought an angry reaction from Birmingham Perry Barr, MP Khalid Mahmood, who accused her of "stereotyping a whole religion".

The Labour Party is bankrupt

Last month the TUC agreed to a £100,000 emergency donation to the Labour Party to pay staff and meet running costs.

Its annual report revealed that Labour is £9 million in debt due to expenses incurred fighting the 2001 General Election and last May's local elections.

Gay power pulls the strings at the Leicester Infirmary

by Henry Summerfield

CLIVE Potter, a devout Christian and a BNP member employed at the Leicester Royal Infirmary under the National Health Service, faced a Disciplinary Committee on Monday 23rd September.

His crime was that he had sent a letter to the NHS Journal in reply to an earlier letter.

That letter was written by a lesbian executive working at Haringay NHS Trust. She extolled the wonders of being gay and working in the NHS.

In his mild letter of reply Clive Potter expressed his opinion, and the Christian view, on the subject. He made the point that the sexuality of those working in the NHS was not an important issue as it was everyone's responsibility to do their best for the patients. He also said that he was heterosexual but did not make it an issue as part of his work. Clive's letter was not published in the paper, but the editor of NHS Journal did telephone the Leicester Royal Infirmary and report Clive for what he had written in his letter.

At the hearing a strongly supportive letter from the Rev. Leslie Robinson was read out but was apparently ignored.

After deliberating for 3 hours the committee returned and reported their findings.

Clive Potter was to be disciplined for a period of 12 months and, if in that period he sends any future letters on any controversial subject without firstly having the letter sanctioned by the Committee, he would again be disciplined.

Clive's apparent crime was that he had questioned the human rights of Gays and Lesbians to promote their opinion on sexuality. It would seem that heterosexuals have no such rights.

Why you must never express an ethnic preference

Afifty-six year-old disabled grandmother was the target of a vicious race hate campaign, all thanks to a misprint in a local newspaper

Mary wanted a "quiet person, no DSS or pets" for her studio flat in Hove, East Sussex, but a telesales operator at the Brighton and Hove edition of the Friday Ad, a free weekly advertising magazine, mis-heard her and put "white person, no DSS or pets". The response was immediate and devastating.

Mary was inundated with abusive, obscene and hateful telephone calls. Brighton Labour Party issued an immediate press release condemning the advertisement and calling for a police investigation under the Race Discrimination Act. The Commission for Racial Equality began their own investigation. The local media jumped on the bandwagon and for the next 48 hours Mary was the south coast's public enemy number one.

"Don't worry," said one caller, "I'll find you." "Have you ever been  by a black man?" asked another, and the threatening calls continued all through the night.

Thankfully Mary's nightmare ended when the mistake was uncovered and the truth revealed, but the whole sorry story provides a dire warning for anyone ever thinking about expressing an ethnic preference.

The driver didn't realise the danger until it was too late!

Welcome to the land of milk and honey!

ARBERORE and Petrit Riza entered Britain illegally using false papers in 1996.

The couple from Kosovo immediately went to the Home Office and claimed asylum. 18 months later they were given a flat by Camden Council.

After two years they produced the required £165,000 to buy the flat outright under Margaret Thatcher's Right-to-Buy scheme.

Eight weeks later they sold the flat for £297,000 pocketing a whopping £132,000 profit.

Oldham rioters walk free

AJURY at Manchester Crown Court allowed Razwan Gul to walk free because video evidence against him was inconclusive.

The footage clearly showed someone hurling stones at the police during the riot in Oldham in May 2001. The prosecution claimed it was Gul, but Judge Barry Woodward dismissed the case against him.

Judge Woodward also dismissed the case against Ibrar Asghar, who had been detained by a police dog after it was alleged he threw a lump of concrete at a policeman. The jury had failed to reach a verdict.

One rioter, however, was jailed for his part in the riot. He was Shofi Uddin, who is the brother of Oldham Lib-Dem councillor Mohib Uddin. It's more embarrassment for Councillor Uddin who had another brother convicted for election fraud last year.

The things they say...

"No one should doubt Mr Blunkett's and New Labour's determination to steer the disillusioned white voter into their camp and away from the BNP, even if it upsets the whingeing liberal lobby and 'maniacs' in the minority ethnic communities."

Herman Ouseley in The Guardian on September 9, 2002

"It would be... logical if the Tories - panicked by the British National Party's recent gains - moved into that ultra-right terrain. But Blunkett seems anxious to cut out the middle man, leapfrogging the Tories and addressing those BNP voters himself."

Jonathan Freedland in The Guardian September 19, 2002

"Those great new Labour thinkers, Peter Mandelson and Philip Gould, are warning the party faithful even now. 'It is not the comfortable middle classes who have most to fear from migration, but those at the cutting edge of vulnerability.' Well done for understanding, at long last, the appeal of the BNP to the indigenous poor, instead of despising it."

Minette Marrin in The Times on September 22, 2002

Christian schools for Christian children

by David Brown

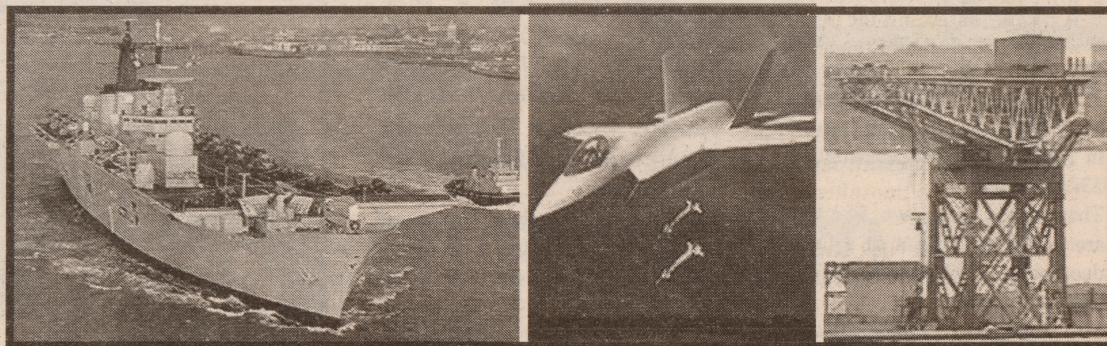

BBRITAIN'S top Church of England school, Canon Slade in Bolton, is defying a call from the Archbishop of Canterbury, George Carey, to admit non-Christian pupils in place of Anglican youngsters. Canon Slade was founded to provide an education for the children of practising Christian parents. It made the headlines in the late nineties for not accepting children of parents who did not attend a Christian church on a regular basis.

It beggars belief that the head of the Church of England, who argues that even if CofE schools are over subscribed they still should include children of other faiths, is seeking to dismantle the foundation stones on which Canon Slade was built. The whole point of this school's existence is to educate the children of practising Christians. Can you imagine George Carey demanding Muslim-only schools accept Christian children?

The Church of England is suffering from a total lack of leadership. It needs to go back to basic beliefs and principles - practising and preaching British Christian values.

The carrier battle to decide Britain's defence future

ARK ROYAL: Faces retirement in 2015. JOINT STRIKE FIGHTER: British modifications? SHIPYARDS: New carriers would safeguard jobs

THE FUTURE OF Britain's defence industry hangs in the balance. Decisions by the Labour Government over the next few weeks will decide whether thousands of British workers keep their jobs, and whether Britain keeps her ability to build the defences our country needs for its protection.

The issue is who will get the £9 billion contract to replace Britain's ageing aircraft carrier fleet. It has already been decided that the Royal Navy's present three carriers, HMS Ark Royal, Invincible and Illustrious, will be cut to two replacement vessels, scheduled to enter service in 2012 and 2015.

The two new carriers will be the biggest and most powerful vessels ever to sail under the White Ensign. Displacing 55,000 tons apiece, they will carry 48 aircraft each.

The vital question is - who will build them, and what aircraft will they carry? In one corner bidding for the project is a British-based consortium led by Britain's largest surviving defence company, BAE Systems, which incorporates such proud old British names as Vosper Thornycroft and Rolls-Royce (the British aero-engine one, not the car firm sold off to Germany's BMW!)

In the other is a foreign alliance led by the French firm Thales and includes the US firms Raytheon, Lockheed-Martin and Halliburton (the same firm that is currently embroiled in a false-accounting scandal involving a number of leading US politicians!)

The British bid is cheaper. It

by Steve Johnson

will guarantee jobs in British shipyards, aero-engine factories and defence works for many years, and will provide profits for British firms.

The British bid also has one further advantage. It has already been decided that our Fleet carriers will not fly British aircraft any more but the multi-national bodge called the 'Joint Strike Fighter', which is being foisted on our Services. But included in the British bid is the offer to modify these planes using British vertical take-off technology, just like the existing Sea Harrier.

The JSF's would be converted to this capability by Rolls-Royce in Britain. It's innovation that would lead, in all likelihood, to further orders from foreign armed forces for this British-modified version of the JSF and would generate and secure even more jobs for British workers.

Vertical take-off jets mean that our aircraft carrier designs are shorter and hence more agile and smaller targets than their lumbering foreign-designed rivals.

"Brussels is pushing hard for the French-led consortium, and New Labour are keen to show what good Europeans they are."

A choice between a technically better, cheaper British design and a more expensive inferior foreign one to defend Britain should pose no problems to a British Government. But Brussels is pushing hard for the French-led consortium, and New Labour are keen to show what good Europeans they are. If Britain loses the contract to build Britain's aircraft carriers, the result will not just be lost British jobs. It will mean British defence firms going bust, leaving us unable to build the ships, planes and armaments we need to defend our national independence.

Raj on Britain

The thoughts of Rajinder Singh

SO New Labour will allow refugees to stay in Britain if they can avoid deportation for seven years!

Most refugees don't need to wait that long and get the right to stay much sooner. Some claim that Kosovo, Albania and Afghanistan are far from liberated and that it is too dangerous for them personally to go back, while others secure the right to stay by marrying a British-born girl.

Although these refugees are new to our country, they will soon feel secure enough to recreate the same kind of life and lifestyle they have left behind. They have strong beliefs and faiths and will maintain the links and ties to their roots that will provide the spiritual motivation to overcome their initial hardships.

These people will change Britain as we know it, but our Government deems it necessary that the British people be kept in ignorance of this danger.

Tony Blair's new legislation to protect the Islamic religion, prohibits me from explaining about our new arrivals to Britain.

Hence the British public must live in blissful naivety, believing that these newcomers will speak the English language, love democracy and secularism, and, of course, be totally loyal to the British Parliament.

So be prepared, try imagining all our ladies wearing burqas by 2062? You may laugh, but ask the native Americans, now living on their reservations, about the new dress code in Dallas and Buffalo.

At least they are able to tell you of that change, today you will not find a Hindu in North Kashmir or a Buddhist in Afghanistan to ask about the changes that have taken place there.

New Labour, with its new legislation, is removing the batteries from the smoke alarm. By the time those asleep are awake to the danger, the fire will have taken hold.

Rajinder Singh is on the BNP's Ethnic Liaison Committee

BNP branch brief

HALIFAX: 140 present, virtually all locals except 25 from nearby Queensbury. Standing room only in a room packed past capacity.

Chaired by Adrian Marsden who spoke of the need for local candidates and for people to come forward and to get active. Mark Collett spoke about Camp Excalibur. Nick Griffin spoke, frequently interrupted by applause from an enthusiastic audience. Great atmosphere.

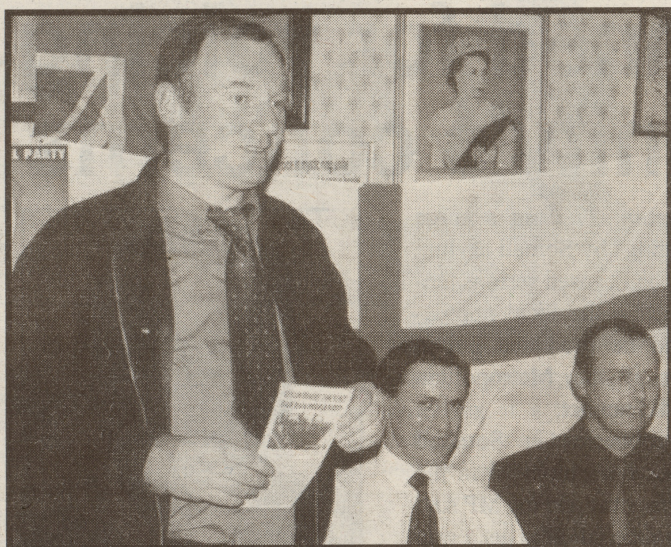

NOTTINGHAM: Nick Griffin spoke about the forces pushing Britain into a war against Iraq. 80 present. Unanimous support for his message.

The collection of more than £400 is being donated to help the Stoke Mayoral Election campaign.

NICK AVERY: Rousing speech WHITEHEATH: Black Country organiser John Salvage chaired the 50-strong meeting. Nigel Avery gave a rousing speech while Simon Darby gave the meeting an insight into the media fuss over the Tipton Boilers amateur football team BNP sponsorship story. The meeting raised more than £300.

GOOLE: Philip Watson reports that activists from York and North Yorkshire held a very successful day of action in Goole on Sunday 22nd of September. Well over 2000 leaflets and copies of Freedom were distributed in the East Yorkshire town. Members of the public were very receptive to the message of hope!

WHAT'S KEVIN TALKING ABOUT?: "New house, new car, foreign holiday, new outfit for my mother-in-law, dishwasher, double-glazing, cuddly toy..." - see page 10!

FORTY BNP members attended a meeting in Sunderland on 11th September. Kevin Scott spoke on the impact of the September 11th attack on British politics. Trevor Agnew spoke on the growth of the BNP in County Durham and Sunderland. John Martin, the party's plans for next year's local elections in the town.

Group Development Report

NINE NEW groups have been formed over the last three months with more meetings in the pipeline to form yet more groups of the party.

Camden & Islington; Westminster; Reading; Thurrock; Merton & Kingston; Manchester S; Salford; Clitheroe and Manchester NE groups of the BNP have all been formed and are already working away. Nearly 50 members and supporters attended the North Manchester meeting at which not one, but two new groups of the party were launched - Manchester NE and Salford. The enthusiasm for the party at the meeting had to be seen to be believed. The potential in Manchester is thought to be every bit as good as nearby Oldham with anecdotal evidence showing many examples of fed up Mancunians looking for a real alternative like the BNP. The first Manchester NE leafletting activity came within a week with ten people taking part. Camden & Islington BNP was relaunched as more than 40 people turned up to agree to get active again. The party has the Red-White-and-

Blue to thank for the establishment of Clitheroe BNP. Before the festival, the party had two members in Clitheroe. Now, thanks to the publicity, the party has twenty members in the town - surpassing Labour! - and an active group regularly leafletting to build for next May's local elections.

Other meetings have seen the party building a holding position with 'caretakers' preparing the ground in an area before the party reaches a sufficient size for it to become an active group of the party.

Recruitment of new members has continued apace over the last year making for the longest sustained growth period, for the British National Party, ever.

It is now vital, that the party build organisationally. Scattered members are all very well, but it is organised party groups campaigning, leafletting and preparing to contest elections that will see the party expand even faster than it has done.

If the party is to have more councillors elected, then more new groups are needed to contest those elections - wherever they are!

Please help to keep the BNP moving forward

A superb £19,229.00 has been raised since May thanks to the generosity of our members and supporters donating to the Progress Fund.

But funds are still desperately needed to enable the British National Party to continue with its development and become a major player within the political arena.

In September the Party produced 62,000 copies of an eight-page, part-full colour newspaper called The Countryside for distribution at the Countryside Alliance March in London. 'Middle England' should provide our natural supporters and the newspaper was specifically designed to encourage them to join our Party.

In October we are contesting the Mayoral Election in Stoke where the BNP failed by just 71 votes to win a seat in the May local council elections. Such a campaign is expensive and we urgently need your help with funding it.

Please send as much as you can afford to: The Treasurer, P.O. Box 16, York, YO61, 3YH. Cheques made payable to 'British National Party' or 'British Heritage'

EXCLUSIVE

FIRE OFFICERS dealing with a house blaze in Leeds on September 11th, were confronted by a gang of youths who began taunting them by shouting "bin Laden, bin Laden", while burning an American flag. The firefighters were upset by the taunts having just watched the 9/11 programme about their American colleagues who perished in the twin towers.

MP condemned for voicing his community's concerns

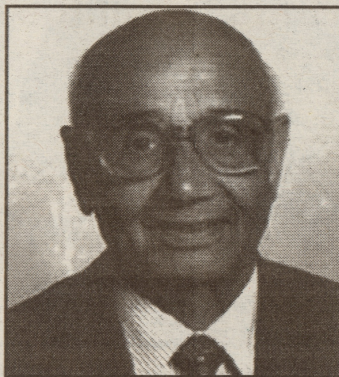

SOUTHALL'S Sikh and Hindu communities are living with the fear of violence every time they leave their homes, according to local MP Piara Khabra.

Mr Khabra, 77, said a surge in muggings by Somali asylum seekers had caused serious tensions within the local population and he predicted public disorder if the Metropolitan Police did not act.

Street robberies in Southall have increased ninefold in the last six months and the MP said that if police failed to get a grip of the problem, local groups would be justified in taking the law into their own hands.

Mr Khabra said: "There is a perception in the community that crime is being committed by Somalis who come to settle in the district."

Needless to say, the MP's comments were condemned by race relations campaigners.

PIARA KHABRA: His comments upset race relations watchdogs!

Suresh Grover, of the local race watchdog the Southall Monitoring Group, accused the MP of stirring up racial tensions. "His comments are absolutely irresponsible. It sickens me that he is stoking up these flames of prejudice."

America is helping the heroin trade

POPPY FARMERS in Afghanistan are the biggest supporters of the American presence in their country.

According to the United Nations, Afghan poppy producers have had a bumper crop this year, which means record levels of heroin will be reach impressionable youngster in the West.

America readily runs bombing missions to flatten any possible Taliban hideout, but these raids have studiously avoided damaging any poppy fields.

As one official put it:

"The U.S military has more immediate objectives in Afghanistan than poppy eradication. If we alienate large segments of the population, the ill-will created towards the U.S would complicate the political picture."

So youngsters in Britain are allowed to die in drug-confused squalor on our streets, just to keep the peace in Afghanistan.

Koran causes a splash

POLICE were inundated with complaints after people were seen throwing books into Preston docks.

In fact it was all 'above board' because Preston Council had given a local mosque permission to dump thousands of copies of the Koran into the Docklands water as part of an Islamic ritual.

Hyas Mohamed from Preston police said;

"People should be better educated so they are aware of such customs."

Just confused, not criminals

METROPOLITAN POLICE Assistant Commissioner, Tarique Ghaffur, Britain's most senior officer from an ethnic minority, has admitted that some minority groups routinely flout laws on issues such as counterfeit goods and drugs.

He said there were "pockets" of lawless white youths in the East End; Bangladeshi youngsters in Tower Hamlets, black youths in Lambeth and Somalis in Brent.

With over 300 different nationalities living in London, Tarique Ghaffur believes that there might be confusion over some laws in Britain. He told The Independent,

"For example, in some communities they don't see it is wrong to counterfeit stuff, while drug usage and its related violence are quite common in the Asian sub-continent."

It's a war about oil and Israel!

of any Iraqi terrorist attacks on US military personnel or civilians on American soil.

George Bush and Tony Blair claim that the invasion is necessary because Iraq's neighbours are living in fear of Saddam's regime, yet even America's staunchest allies amongst those neighbours, Turkey, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, say they don't feel threatened by Iraq and oppose a war.

George Bush and Tony Blair claim the invasion is necessary because Iraq has weapons of mass destruction, but former UN Arms Inspector Scott Ritter says that it is just not the case.

President Mubarak of Egypt has predicted devastating consequences for the Middle East

IRAQ:
How can a country that was bombed back into the Dark Ages just four years ago, pose any threat to a superpower like America?

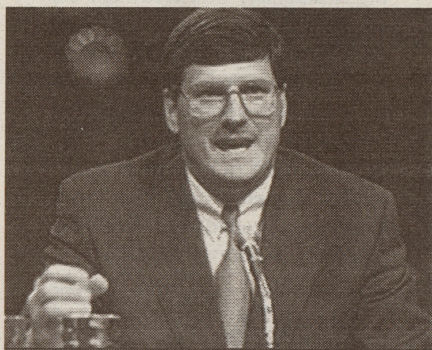

if Iraq is attacked. "We fear a state of disorder and chaos."

So is America prepared to provoke these 'devastating consequences' just to obtain Iraq's oil? No, it is not just about oil. The hidden "ideological" motivation for any attack on Iraq was recently revealed by Madeleine Albright, the former Secretary of State under President Bill Clinton;

"The issue is not about the security of the United States, nor is it about the security of other Arab nations in the region. It's all about the enhancement of the security of the state of Israel!"

SCOTT RITTER: The former UN Arms Inspector has ridiculed America's claim that Iraq has weapons of mass destruction.

Councillors' Casebook

Simon Bennett of the Councillors' Support Group brings us all the latest news from Burnley

JAMES COWELL is now something of a 'veteran' on the campaign trail to be elected to Burnley Borough Council.

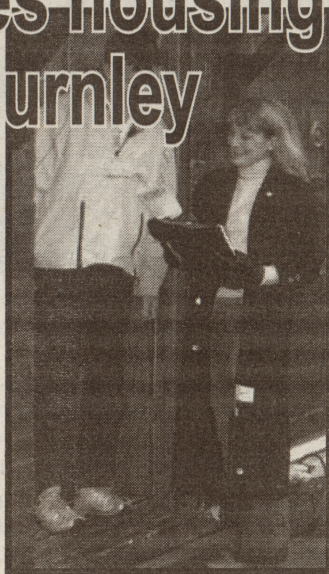

James, who is due to have his autobiography published shortly, is hoping it will be third time lucky in May 2003 when he contests the Rosehill with Burnley Wood seat for the British National Party.

He is a familiar face in the ward since making the national headlines last November when he beat the Lib-Dems and Conservatives in a by-election in the ward. He scored an impressive 19% of the vote then and was able to increase it to 22% last May, and this in spite of the concerted 'smear' campaign against the BNP led by Burnley Labour Party.

With his customary enthusiasm Jim has already started his campaign for May 2003 and has been out distributing a leaflet he penned himself. Even though it's 8 months to polling day, he believes it is important to keep in contact with the ward and the leaflet was a way of achieving this.

Jim was born and bred in Burnley and is married with four grown up children. He spent a lot of his working life down Hapton Valley Pit and Huncoat Pit and in between stints at the pits he served 3 years in the Royal Air Force. After a spell at Prestige he set up his own joinery business and has since retired. His family have lived in Rosehill since 1961.

Carol secures housing victory for Burnley pensioners

CAROL HUGHES: Won a victory for Burnley's old folks

BURNLEY AND Padiham Community Housing are to scrap its 'young and old' integration policy thanks to Councillor Carol Hughes.

Carol's attention was brought to this little known policy by a resident whose 75 year-old mother was at its sharp end. The policy was to let out flats above old people to 'problem' youngsters, some as young as 16, and label it the 'integration of young and old'.

Approaches to the local Labour councillors were ignored, so the resident contacted Councillor Hughes. Carol was appalled to hear of such a ludicrous policy and it amazed her that B.P.C.H. could seriously believe such a scheme could work. It sounded as though it was motivated by a philosophy of "let the houses at any cost, and to hell with the consequences". When Carol became involved, the social housing providers started back-tracking and now the policy has been scrapped.

Councillor Hughes said: "I'm delighted Burnley and Padiham Community Housing have ditched this unworkable policy. Campaigning on behalf of Burnley's ignored communities is exactly what I went into politics for."

SEPTEMBER SAW the first of what will be fortnightly BNP Councillor Surgeries in Burnley.

Terry Grogan conducted a surgery for his Gannow residents and there was a steady stream of visitors with problems to put before their councillor. Speeding was a big worry to some residents, especially on Sycamore Avenue where a long straight road tempts speeding. The worry is that the road passes by school playing fields and Terry is hoping to introduce some sort of 'speed calming' measures before there is a serious accident.

Drug dealing within the ward was also high on peoples' concerns. Councillor Grogan is pledged to combat any 'drug culture' in Gannow and he has been liaising with police to ensure that information passed on and action is taken immediately.

Many problems relating to fly-tipping, discarded black bags of rubbish, overflowing bins and overgrown trees were also brought to his attention and all these matters are now being tackled.

Terry was delighted with the response to the surgery and felt it was a very constructive and productive exercise.

Still 8 months to go to polling day but Jim Cowell is already out on the campaign trail

An exercise in cultivation

"We plough the fields, and scatter the good seed on the land."

THERE WAS AN evening race meeting at Hexham at the end of June. The Northumberland course looked at its best on this cool summer evening and a large crowd of national hunt enthusiasts enjoyed the proceedings. The meeting was sponsored by the Countryside Alliance and there was the usual appearance of huntsmen with their hounds, and a wealth of attractive young ladies selling tombola tickets to raise funds for the organisation. Prior to the last race a spokesman for the Alliance rallied the crowd and called for "the biggest ever manifestation of countryside supporters" in London on September 22nd, to show Tony Blair and his Government the strength of feeling of Britain's rural communities. I thought of that gentleman when the 400,000th marcher was clocked-up at the end of the march. He, along with the organisers of the Countryside Alliance, must have gained immense satisfaction from this show of strength that they had worked so hard to bring together. It was a massive turnout, and Tony Blair can have been left in no doubt as to the strength of feeling within rural Britain...

But the Prime Minister clearly wasn't that bothered. In fact, within 24 hours, he had instructed ministers to push through, with the greatest speed possible, the bill to ban hunting with hounds.

The reaction of the media too, was disappointing. They seemed more interested in reporting the traffic chaos caused, and gave almost as much coverage to the 100 anti-hunt demonstrators as they did to the 400,000 marchers.

Yasmin Alibhai-Brown, writing in The Independent, was very concerned that there might be a coded racist message coming from the hordes of rosy-cheeked rural folk with their banners calling for the protection of the British way of life. The broadsheets, on the whole, were disparaging of the efforts of the Countryside Alliance, predicting there would be little movement from the Government despite the euphoria of the marchers.

But for some, Sunday 22nd of September provided an excellent opportunity for the cultivation of Britain's slowly awakening, long-silent majority. Seventy-odd tillers of the political soil were busy all day distributing 46,000 nationalist seeds to one-in-nine marchers. This seed was in the form of an eight-page, part-full colour, newspaper called The Countrysider.

It was produced by the BNP specifically for those who care about the countryside. It will provide something for them to turn to when they realise that their day trip to London, on its own, has achieved absolutely nothing.

The voice of rural Britain will only be heard, and listened to, if it is channelled into votes at the ballot box. Votes supporting a political party which stands on its own, campaigning on behalf of the British people. That party is the British National Party.

AT HOME IN A TORY HEARTLAND: There were more than 50 members at the September meeting of Bournemouth BNP. Local organiser, Peter Shaw (standing) reported that the branch would be contesting a number of council seats in the town next May.

THERE ARE other factors the BNP could have included in the leaflet, Stop the Building.

The floods in mainland Europe have come earlier than expected this year and with devastating force.

You could have included the fact that the destruction of countryside contributes to the cause of this heavy flooding. Trees hold thousands of gallons of water, when the trees are gone the water is released into the environment. Building on green belt land traps water as there are no ditches, streams or water courses to allow it to flow into lower levels, then into the sea.

Another factor which was overlooked was that only property built on high level ground will be sought after. Property on lower ground, which will become susceptible to floods, will not be saleable and no insurance company will insure such property. So Tony Blair's house building schemes are very bad for Britain. Will the green lobby grab the nettle? No, yellow is more their colour when it comes to taking on Labour.

Anita Croxall, aged 14,
Ferndown.

We need direction

I LIVE in Slough. It's a very mixed up town with a very dodgy council.

My grandfather was a DFC Hurricane and Spitfire pilot in WW2, and my 94 year-old grandmother is as frustrated as we all are with those in charge. She would like a rebellion!

I keep banging my head against a brick wall and throwing £850+ a month in tax to a Government that has led our country into terminal decline. Last Friday night, a friend of the family who works for Slough Borough Council, came over for a drink and she (oops) let it slip that the Council had already spent £8 MILLION on immigrants since April of this year!

My family and I (and I know of many others) have had enough. Something must be done.

All we need is direction.

Mark Varley, Slough

Devastating effects

WE only need to look at nature to know that the BNP policy on immigration is on the right track. Take for example the red squirrel. It was driven from its natural habitat after the introduction of the grey squirrel, and now there are just a few remaining colonies in the north of England and Scotland.

This could be equated to the indigenous population faced with large scale immigration to this country - it's called white flight.

There are numerous examples of foreign species being introduced into non-natural habitats in this country. For example the giant toad, Spanish bluebell and huge wasps, all with potentially devastating effects.

We ignore nature at our peril.

Consistent attitude

I BELIEVE that the BNP should be focussing rather more on the revival of a non-contentious, "non-racist" nationalism or patriotism. Regarding the labels 'racism' or 'racist' I think that we, as a party, should make up our mind how to respond and then try to maintain a consistent attitude. I believe there are 3 options:

1. Accept the label racist, but redefine it so that it does not involve the overtones of race hatred. (This approach is surely a loser!)
2. Reject the term when applied to us and apply it to our opponents as much as we can.

3. Reject the use of the word altogether, and whenever it crops up explain (to the point of tedium!) that it does not belong to rational political discourse but to the black arts of revolutionary propaganda.

Dennis Whiting, Whitstable

It's 54 years

CONGRATULATIONS on the new look Voice of Freedom, it's an improvement and the paper is full of useful information and news of the BNP.

But I was wondering why you say in Thoughts on Immigration that "... governments for the past thirty years have allowed large scale immigration ... etc, etc?" It is over fifty years, isn't it? To be exact it began with the notorious 'Empire Windrush' in 1948 which is 54 years ago.

Tony Young, London E11

Jobs for life

THOUGH figures are normally hard to come by, the BBC World Service in their Health Matters programme of September 2nd, stated that in Oxford there are 1500 asylum seekers (1% of the population) and 100 of them are unaccompanied children.

The programme was about how those among the unaccompanied children who are "disturbed", or "traumatised" are treated by a number of psychologists, counselors, therapists, etc. and go to a special school.

If they claim to be 'depressed', the children get a great deal of attention; one child who was dispersed to Newcastle became depressed and was returned to Oxford. Another case mentioned was that of a boy who attacked everyone he came into contact with. There was a girl who broke down when any suggestion was made of returning her to Uganda. As there are "24 million refugees in the world", it would seem that people working for asylum seekers have a job for life, at least that was the impression the listener got.

R.Tandy, Kings Lynn

Why no coverage?

THERE was a major security alert at Lunar House, the refugee administration centre in Croydon, at the beginning of September. An asylum seeker, whose application to stay in Britain had been refused, returned to the building with a blue canister claiming it to be anthrax. The whole area around Lunar House was closed for hours and traffic was brought to a standstill. It was a huge operation with gas masks, evacuations, police cordons etc. - Strangely enough though, the event was ignored by the media!

POLITICS WAS to the fore in the British news with former Technology Minister, Reg Prentice, resigning from the Government to join the Tories. He said that there were too many Marxists in the Labour Party.

British Leyland chief, Sir Richard Dobson, was forced to resign after making a speech in which he referred to "bribing wogs to get contracts". He was replaced by Michael Edwardes. On October 27th former Liberal Party leader, Jeremy Thorpe, was under media scrutiny and forced to defend his reputation and integrity. He categorically denied ever having a homosexual relationship with Norman Scott.

BNP parades countryside credentials

by Tony Lecomber

MORE THAN 400,000 protestors from all over Britain marched through London on Sunday 22nd September. Two marches for 'Liberty' and 'Livelihood' converged in Whitehall to demonstrate to Prime Minister, Tony Blair, that all is not well in the countryside.

In a carefully co-ordinated activity, the British National Party was at the Countryside March in force to show rural Britain that there is a party which cares about the countryside. The BNP is at the forefront of the campaign to preserve village shops and rural bus services. The BNP is the only party that offers real policies to combat rural poverty, declining farm incomes and the destruction of village life.

The hunting fraternity were there too, concerned at the loss of freedom to pursue country pursuits, as were anglers worried that if foxhunting is banned they will be next. Both sports witnessing first hand the imposition of urban political correctness on country life.

At five points, including Hyde Park, more than seventy BNP activists distributed more than 46,000 copies of a specially produced paper, The Countrysider. The reception from country folk was uniformly friendly and BNP teams struggled to keep up with the demand from the marchers. The sun shone, the mood of the BNP teams and marchers was cheerful and the colourful array of flags and banners stood out against the green of Barbour jackets and hats.

The day was described by party members as 'an excellent activity' with 'a fantastic response' and 'The Countrysider went like hot cakes'.

A Channel 4 camera man filming the Hyde Park team giving out papers asked one lady taking a paper if she realised the paper was produced by the BNP. Her filmed reply was 'So what?' If that is shown and doesn't end up on the cutting room floor, it will accurately sum up the attitude of the marchers as a whole towards the party. What became very clear from the day's activities was that country folk are not the exclusive electoral preserve of the Tory Party. The BNP is very able and willing to represent their concerns without all the politically correct baggage that comes with the Tories.

The impact of this activity will continue to be felt for months to come as the party continues to widen its constituency to appeal to more and more people.

BNP booming down in Devon

TONY NORTH, the British National Party's Regional Organiser for Devon and Cornwall reports that there are now four functioning BNP units in Devon.

Tony told Freedom;

"To meet growing demand Plymouth has been divided into two separate groups with Nick and Wendy Jones organising Plymouth East, and Marie Doyle looking after Plymouth West. Nick is a security consultant and wife Wendy a nurse, while Marie is a mother of three and mature student.

In North Devon the group organiser is a former Conservative Party campaign worker, Peter Chantler. He is a farmer on the edge of Exmoor looking after 125 acres and 300 head of sheep.

The newest BNP group is in East Devon where a former United Nations pilot, Peter Lucas, is pulling things into shape in this part of the county."

Media attention on the BNP has been unrelenting in this part of the country ever since Nick Griffin's well publicised tour in June. Tony North was on television again on September 20th when Carlton TV invited him to take part in a discussion about asylum.

While Devon, at the moment, is very much the centre of BNP activity in Tony North's region, Cornwall is soon to come out of the shadows. Tony reports; "We are about to make a splash with an announcement of our Cornwall group's inaugural meeting - Watch this space!"

Anti-'Nazi' League thugs caught on CCTV in Burnley!

VANDALISED: Burnley accountant Steve Smith was called out early on Sunday morning to view the damage.

OFFICERS from Lancashire Constabulary's Pennine Division are looking at CCTV camera footage as part of their investigation into an attack on the town centre offices of a Burnley accountant.

Steve Smith, as well as running an accountancy firm in the town, is also the local British National Party organiser. He was the target of the attack and it was not only the shutters of the ground floor office that were sprayed with graffiti, but also two windows in the first floor offices were cracked by air rifle pellets.

"These people are trying to use intimidation and vandalism to stop free speech," Steve Smith told the Lancashire Evening Telegraph, "but a bit of damage to my office is not going to deter me."

"What I find ironic is that these people have the cheek to call me the Nazi!"

Police are looking into the possibility that the attack might have been in response to the highly successful Red, White and Blue family festival held in nearby Sawley the same weekend. Photographs of Anti-'Nazi' League demonstrators at that event are being compared to CCTV images taken in Burnley on the night of the attack.

BNP think-tank for Reading

A PRIVATE BNP meeting for invited guests held at Reading's Beansheaf Centre caused panic within the town's political establishment.

The meeting's organiser, Scott Windor, told the Reading Evening Post,

"It was more of a think-tank rather than a meeting. Thirty BNP members were invited to discuss the possibility of setting up a branch in the town."

Think-tank or not, it certainly upset local politicians.

Deputy leader of Reading Council, Jo Lovelock, said,

"Voters in Reading would never put the BNP on the council," while the leader of West Berkshire council Lena Rust said, "I'm very concerned at this news."

New units in London and Essex

SEPTEMBER saw the setting up of three new BNP groups in the London and Essex region.

There were 15 people at a meeting in New Malden, Surrey, on Tuesday 3rd September, to set up the new unit of Kingston & Merton BNP.

Daniel Thomas is the acting Group organiser and he has already been in contact with the post office concerning a new Post Office box number.

City & Westminster also have a new group under acting organiser, Michael Anderson, while a new BNP unit for Harlow & Bishops Stortford has been set-up by acting organiser Steve Johnson.

B&Q sacking scandal...

"It has been settled to my satisfaction" - Kevin Scott

KEVIN SCOTT, the BNP local election candidate who lost his job with DIY giant B&Q after the firm was targeted by left-wing thugs, has agreed a compensation package with his former employers.

"I cannot make any comment on the matter, apart from to say it has been settled to my satisfaction," Kevin told Freedom.

"I will now try to find another job, which is my priority, while continuing with my political work for the British National Party."

Kevin was sensationally dismissed from B&Q's Scotswood Road store in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, after a campaign of intimidation from the Anti-'Nazi' League against the store and B&Q headquarters. He was due to fight his case for unfair dismissal at an employment tribunal, but 24 hours before the hearing Kevin accepted a generous compensation offer from the firm.

The role of Unison in this whole sorry episode is a real blight on the union. Unison NEC member Yunus Baksh met with B&Q bosses at the Newcastle store prior to Kevin's dismissal and as he left the store he told Kevin; "You won't have this job for much longer, mate!"

BNP Barbecue in Wigan

SATURDAY afternoon on the 14th of September saw the second barbecue of the year held by Wigan BNP.

The event took place in a beautiful location on the outskirts of Wigan, and special thanks is due to our sympathetic landowner for the use of his site.

The event was well-attended by over 40 adults and children, and it was nice to see such a cross section of local people proving how much the party's image has changed in recent years.

A number of new members offered their services as activists and a substantial amount of money was raised for local funds.

A special thanks must go to Richard, Rob and Sharon for the excellent fayre.

'View from Wigan Pier'

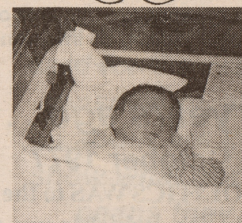

THIS is the name of a new four-page newspaper published by Wigan BNP to help with their May 2003 council election campaign.

The well-produced publication covers all aspects of the political scene in Wigan and is distributed free within the wards the party has targeted as 'winnable' next year.

One of the lead stories concerned Wigan Council having to ask the town's taxpayers for an extra £121,000 over two years, to meet the needs of the town's asylum seekers!

BNP demo against Islamic extremism

by Bob Gertner

On Wednesday September 11th there was a mobilisation of BNP activists and supporters for a demonstration in north London.

The BNP contingent congregated outside the home of Islamic extremism in Britain - the infamous Finsbury Park Mosque - to demonstrate against a meeting discussing the "positive outcomes" of last year's terrorist attacks in the USA.

This mosque is the base for the fanatical al-Muhajiroun group led by Mullahs Abu Hamza & Omar Bakri.

The BNP's Instant Response Group successfully organised the protest at very short notice, with the YBNP chairman Mark Collett producing a fabulous banner emblazoned with our party's emblem and the slogan, "Keep Britain out of foreign wars, keep foreign wars out of Britain." He also produced an informative leaflet for the public about the event.

The atmosphere was electric and the 100-plus nationalist crowd, including several ladies and OAPs, were orderly and disciplined throughout and a credit to the party.

A loud-hailer was used to great effect with excellent speeches made by Chris Roberts, the London & Essex regional organiser and Jason Douglas, the East London organiser, directed at the mosque's mask clad inhabitants and the assembled international media circus.

A rendition of Rule Britannia was sang by all with great gusto and a sea of Union Jacks and St George's cross flags were displayed by our people - a very rare thing indeed to see in multi-racial Finsbury Park, an area of London where white people are in the minority.

The activity achieved the objective of getting extensive media coverage and proving to the British people that the BNP is the only political party in this country with the conviction and courage to stand up against these Islamic fundamental extremists - whose aim is to turn Britain into an Islamic state.

Well done to all those who took part!

VOICE OF FREEDOM SPORT

Scots must invest in home-grown talent

"Scotland are 2-0 down to a bunch of rocks in the North Atlantic!"

THAT'S HOW the BBC's Radio 5 commentator reported the humiliating score-line from Scotland's European Championship game against the Faroe Islands.

Although the Scots fought back to claim a point, the game starkly illustrated the desperate level to which football north of the border has plummeted.

The reason for this decline is painfully obvious to anyone who understands the basic guidelines of self-sufficient politics. If you invest in growing your own, you build up a strong home market. Then you make money by exporting your surplus and re-invest these proceeds back in growing more.

Back in the 1960s and 1970s Scottish football had a strong pool of home grown talent. So much so that Scottish footballers were even in demand by the 'Old Enemy' for the English First Division.

Tottenham Hotspur's double-winning side of 1961 had the brilliant Bill Brown in goal, the robust Dave Mackay at left-half and the majestic John White at inside-left. All Scots plying their trade in England, but always on call for Scottish international duty.

The number of English players playing in the Scottish League could be counted on one hand. They just weren't needed because of the abundance of home-grown talent.

WHAT A HUMILIATION! Scotland go 2-0 down to the part-timers of the Faroe Islands

In 1971 there were 54 Scots playing in the English First Division, at the beginning of this season there are just five in the Premiership.

Scotland doesn't have any home-grown talent anymore.

The reason for this is that for the ing the proceeds of the extensive football youth programmes in existence in Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland.

There's hardly a Scottish-born player in either Rangers or Celtic, and even the First and Second clubs are now relying on foreign players.

As an international force Scotland are finished - for the next ten years at least.

To re-build their team they need radical changes in their football set-up. They need to limit the number of foreign players per club to a maximum of two, and the money saved on overseas players' wages must be invested in youth schemes at every club.

In the short-term Scottish club football might suffer on the European stage as a result, but that is a price worth paying to rebuild an effective football structure in a country with such a proud footballing tradition.

*Much the same fate awaits English football. Just check out the Premiership line-ups any Saturday.

STOP THE BETRAYAL OF OUR WAR DEAD

The last moments of
HMS Lancastria

On June 17th 1940 the troopship HMS Lancastria was sunk off the coast of France with the loss of 5,000 men. Many of them stood on the burning ship knowing that they were just seconds from death but courageously sang "There'll always be an England". Two generations later there is still an England, but it is unrecognisable from the land that these brave men died going to defend.

Our democracy, identity and economic independence are more at risk now than they were 60 years ago! In short our war dead have been betrayed by successive British Governments. We may have won the wars against Napoleon, the Kaiser and Hitler, but we have lost the peace.

Our judges and elected officials can be overruled by European Union bureaucrats. We are even being blackmailed by foreign businessmen to ditch the pound or they will shut down British industry.

Left-wing councils now decide when and where we can fly our own national flag in our own country!

The free speech that Britons died for is being undermined by the politically correct 'loony liberal lobby'.

Is this the Britain that those names on our war memorials died for?

Of course not! So why do we allow our politicians to treat us this way? Remember that those brave Britons died for your future, so make sure you do something to safeguard their memory and your children's future. - Mr. S. Hippisley, Glastonbury.

There is an effective therapy for paedophile child killers... cheap, 'low-tech' and it would work every time!

If you caught a rat in your kitchen, would you put it in a cage, feed it up and build up its physical strength, then after a short time release it back into your home?

Our beloved native red squirrel has been driven to the edge of extinction by the alien immigrant North American grey squirrel in just over 100 years.
